Elk Point Remembers

A capacity crowd took part in Elk Point Royal Canadian Legion's 1994 Rembrance Day observances, Friday, November 11 at the Seniors' Recreation Centre, where for the second consecutive year, the parade took place indoors.

An honor guard of RCMP, Legion members, Elks, OORP, Guides and Pathfinders, Cubs and Scouts marched into and around the hall to open the service, following a welcome by MC Sid Holthe. Pastor Jim MacLellan gave the prayer of invocation.

Following the Last Post, all observed a moment of silence in remembrance of those who died in our country's service. Following Reveille, Holthe recited the act of remembrance.

Carlen Mutch recited the well known poem, "In Flanders Fields," while James Purdy added an original poem, "So We Could Be Free," which led him to provincial honors in the 1993 Poppy Contest.

Pastor MacLellan offered a prayer prior to the laying of wreaths.

Deborah Grey, representing the federal government, Louis Verhagen, who stood in for MLA Paul Langevin as provincial government representative, Mayor Ed Buck for the Town of Elk Point and Councillor Bob Smith for the County of St. Paul laid the first four wreaths. Edith Womacks, whose late husband was a World War II veteran, laid a wreath as a Silver Cross mother. Sgt. John Humphrey represented the RCMP, while Genevieve Russell and Wayne Palmer laid a wreath for the Legion. Thirty three additional wreaths were laid by representatives of a wide range of organizations and businesses, as well as some in memory of specific individuals.

A benediction and blessing by Pastor MacLellan completed that protion of the morning. Sergeant-at-arms Wayne Palmer placed the colors. (Continued on pg. 2)

A TIME TO REMEMBER - Elk Point Royal Canadian Legion members Genevieve Russell and Wayne Palmer pause for a moment of reflection after placing the Legion's wreath at the indoor cenotaph last Friday.

Rat alert!

Elk Point and area residents are asked to be on the alert for the presence of Norway Rats, after mysterious tracks and droppings at a local residence were identified as those of this prohibited species.

Although Alberta is well known as a rat-free province, Orest Popil, a Pest Control Officer with the County of Vermilion River, says that the rodents could cross the border in trucks coming from other provinces. Neither he nor County of St. Paul assistant fieldman Larry Lamothe has heard of rats in the Elk Point area until now.

An Elk Point family first noticed something was wrong at their north-end mobile home when a bowl of wrapped candies left on the floor overnight was almost empty the next morning. Chewed up bits of paper and a gnawed-on potato were later found behind the living room furniture, and the man's co-worker suggested he phone the Department of Agriculture.

The pest control officer who responded to the call soon identifed the pairs of tracks, with a tail drag between them, which circled much of the exterior of the home and "did a lot of cruising" around the yard, as those of a Norway Rat. Droppings were also found which confirmed the ELK POINT'S MOST WANTED - If you sight a rodent answering this description and 4 to 10 times the size of a house mouse, please contact the County of St. Paul immediately. The Norway Rat above is the only one legal in this county - he's stuffed.

Ambulance service resumed

Elk Point's ambulance service is back on the road, at least on a temporary basis.

Two lengthy meetings between representatives of the Elk Point Town Council, the County of St. Paul, Elk Point Municipal Hospital and ambulance owner Fred Lambright resulted in a pledge of shared funding from now until the end of 1994, while the Town and County study the issue further.

The two Councils will split the $7500 per month Lambright needs to keep Elk Point covered with 24 hour-per-day ambulance service for the next month and a half. This will give the two councils time to study the various options for providing ongoing service.

A meeting last Wednesday night was set up after Town Council agreed at Monday's regular meeting that something must be done quickly to ensure area residents would be provided with emergency service. Wednesday's meeting included four councillors from each jurisdiction, as well as two Hospital Board members, Hospital Administrator Clem Johnson and Director of Patient Services Colleen Simon, and Lambright.

A previous attempt to set up an ambulance authority took place two years ago, when the Hospital Board met with the various counties served by Elk Point and District Ambulance, but the project was shelved while they waited for changes to the Hospitals Act, which Hospital Board spokesman Marvin Bjornstad said "never came." Since then, cutbacks have resulted in further declines in ambulance use. Bjornstad said that "our postition always was that we serve from here to the border, and we have to look at serving the whole area. Funding would have to come from the County, the Town and surrounding areas."

County councillor Robert Bouchard, who is on the board which operates the joint County and Town of St. Paul ambulance system, said that those two jurisdictions have split capital allocations of $25,000 each year since the system was established in

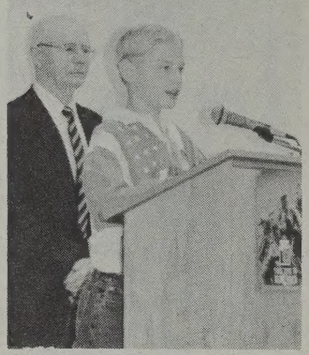
Legion President Louis Verhagen welcomed the good turnout of those who took time to remember. He explained the purpose of the Poppy Fund, which goes toward the welfare of veterans, RCMP veterans and their dependants, as well as to support the annual Poppy Contests.

He added that this year there is also a Cenotaph Fund, as the Legion attempts to raise funds to erect a new cenotaph to honor the servicemen and women, the merchant marine, the RCMP and those who endured the hardships of war on the home front.



YOUNG POET James Purdy gives his tribute to the war dead. MC Sid Holthe presided over the Remembrance Day observances.

Verhagen told the audience that all the rights we take for granted were earned the hard way by those who fought for Canada, and that the veterans of the future will continue to fight for the nation and its people. "We as a community, and as a nation, must remember."

Sgt. John Humphrey, RCMP, had no personal war memories to relate, but said his parents had lived through the blitz in London, and his father served with the RAF as a navigator. "I shudder to think of the consequences had Canada not taken part in the war." He is proud that the RCMP takes part in the continued tradition of service, in Bosnia and Haiti.

Mayor Ed Buck congratulated the Legion for continuing the tradition of Remembrance Day, and the young people for taking part. "This should be a time to put personal animosities and differences aside as we remember together."

Bob Smith was proud to represent the County "as we remember and honor those who gave their lives for the greatest country in the world."

Verhagen read a message from MLA Langevin, who said in part that "we can never express enough recognition to those who defended us."

MP Deborah Grey, in a time when we are surrounded by stark images of war, asked that "those of us who are too young to remember war be grateful that we have never had to send a brother, husband, son or daughter into battle." She thanked the veterans, as well as today's RCMP and military, who are prepared to defend us should the need arise.

Sid Holthe read a message from Prime Minister Jean Chretien, who was observing Remembrance Day in Hong Kong.

All joined in the singing of a hymn, "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory," prior to hearing a Remembrance Day message from United Church minister Rev. Norman Hartley who said he has "come to know many people who have known the horrors of war." He told the story of a man whose Spitfire aircraft was downed in the Battle of Britain, leaving him badly disfigured by fire. He recovered and returned to active service, flying fighters until D-Day. Later he became a bush pilot, worked for the government as a pilot, and helped to develop an air ambulance service. He is active in his community, and has "spent his life giving of his talents, his time and his self to fellow human beings. God's work is still being performed by the unlikely in ways that are unusual." Rev. Hartley said that peace efforts worldwide have been many, and "so much has been accomplished, but there is so much left to do. Those who have fallen are best remembered by those who continue their job." Pastor MacLellan offered a final prayer.

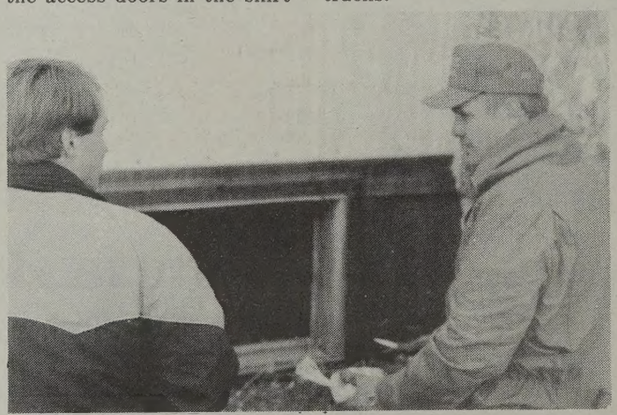
Popil subsequently placed a number of bags of rat bait, containing warfarin, inside the access doors in the skirting of the mobile home, and said the rat would probably find the bait within a matter of days. He and Lamothe were also going to check the yards of nearby homes for rat tracks.



THEY SMELL A RAT! - Orest Popil (right), Pest Control Officer with the County of Vermilion River, prepares to place rat baits under a mobile home while Larry Lamothe, Assistant Fieldman with the County of St. Paul, looks on.

In the past, Popil has been called to rat sightings in farmyards, where he checks first the buildings, then a two-mile radius. However, virtually all sightings have been pocket gophers rather than their more destructive relatives. A Norway Rat is between four and ten times the size of a house mouse, and is similar in color.

Alberta's pest control officers save farmers $40 to $50 million in crops and building damage each year with their valiant efforts to keep the province rat-free. Because of the rat-free status, Alberta products are more saleable to export destinations such as the Pacific Rim countries, because they are felt to come from a cleaner, more sanitary environment.

"It's nobody's fault that this rat came here," Popil said, "but we have to alert the whole town to the possibility that there could be more of them in the area."

Isolated in more ways than one

Violence against women happens in many different ways. No matter where you are, abuse makes you feel helpless and alone. To be abused is to feel isolated.

Abused women living in a remote area are doubly trapped. An open field may be the only route of escape for an assaulted woman who lives far from other people. Asking fro help means the whole community may soon know about your problems.

Where a woman lives can affect the way she feels about an abusive relationship and her reasons for not leaving that relationship. Physical isolation can lead her to think that she is the only woman being treated badly. In isolated areas, friends are harder to reach, and feelings of loneliness increase. Women living in isolation are more likely to have low self-worth and to be depressed or suicidal.

Choices may be limited, so problem-solving can be more difficult. Assaulted women in rural areas are less likely to go for help to police, neighbors, clergy or doctors. They are more likely to seek help from relatives or lawyers. Geographic isolation affects both the willingness to ask for help and the kind of help available.

Women who experience violence may not even know what is happening to them is abuse and that it is illegal.

Women with disabilities are up to 10 times more likely to be assaulted. Shelters and transition houses for battered women are not usually designed to serve these women, and services that are fully accessible to women with disabilities are even scarcer in rural and remote areas.

Women living in a rural or remote area may choose not to report the violence because they are isolated from support or safety. Outside solutions often do not work in rural communities. Women worry about the lack of privacy in their small community and there is pressure to stay in the relationship. They often fear they will be beaten or harassed, no matter where they go. They don't have money to get to a shelter, and they feel if they leave, they won't get a job, education, day care or good housing. These are just a few reasons a rural woman might choose not to report the abuse to anyone.

Health care providers such as nurses are often the first people rural women encounter after acts of violence and abuse. These professionals can look for physical signs of abuse. They can also watch for emotional signs (depression, stress, insomnia, suicidal tendencies and overuse of medication). They can display information about area shelters or transition houses, women's services and rape crisis centres in their examination rooms and in public waiting rooms. Health professionals can educate themselves and their colleagues.

Religious leaders are also in a good position to help women in rural areas who are suffering from abuse. They can remind families that no religion should condone violence. Educating the congregation about violence is a must, and religious leaders can maintain an updated list of agencies that will help abused women.

Police often come into contact with women soon after they have been abused. The police officers should remember that these women are likely to be terrified and exhausted, and that charges laid by the police are the most effective means of providing a deterrent to abusers and of ensuring safety for the women.

Anyone who is aware of a woman who is in an abusive relationship can encourage her to talk, to get information about abuse, and to think about the choices available and how to develop a safety plan. If she is in a violent situation, help her get in touch with shelters, the police, churches, health care providers or crisis lines.

There is also help for men who abuse women. It is possible for men to learn new ways of relating to women and to change how they act, but it is not easy and it cannot be done in one or two counselling sessions. It is particularly difficult to find such counsellins services in rural and remote areas.

In Elk Point you can call the Family Support Group at 724-2380. The Damily Support Group meets bi-monthly, the 1st and 3rd Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Elk Point Hospital. Meeting structure consists of a safe, trustworthy, confident environment in which to share. The Crisis Centre in St. Paul (645-5195) also provides assistance and there is a provincial toll-free number, 1-800-263-3043 where trained staff are ready to assist callers.

RULES FOR FIGHTING FAIR

1. Identify the problem.
2. Focus on the problem.
3. Attack the problem, not the person.
4. Listen with an open mind.
5. Treat a person's feelings with respect.
6. Take responsibility for your actions.

Don't resort to unfair fighting (pushing, making excuses, bringing up the past, not taking responsibility, put-downs, sneering, getting even, hitting, bossing, blaming, name calling, not listening, threats, etc.)

The Family Forum

Jim MacLellan

Are you prepared to leave home? Many might find themselves saying, "No!" How foolish to know you're going on a trip and have failed to prepare! In spite of various philosophies, the reality is that all of us will leave home... permanently. I understand that older Canadians may become psychologically ready for death when retirement creeps on the horizon, but psychological preparation is only partial preparation. Here are some things that could be put in place now... whether you're 24, 44 or 84.

1. Make a will. They are not only valuable in their legal significance, they make life easier for your survivors. This not only should identify major assets, but it should also help in seeing that those certain personal belongings of significance of where you want. It's not enough to say to Susie, "You can have the old desk." Put it in the will.

2. Select a doctor. Before you're sick, ensure you have and are comfortable with your physician. There's value in having a trustworthy doctor – there's more value in having one who knows you.

3. Appoint a Durable Power of Attorney (DPA). This is a flexible but legal instrument. It authorizes someone you trust to make decisions regarding your health, finances, etc. in the event you cannot. It is written to only take effect under certain specific conditions.

4. Arrange funerals in advance. Even a letter that might say something like this: I don't have a prearranged funeral with anyone. My preference is that I be (cremated, buried, etc.) I prefer a (open or closed) casket funeral, in (my church, such and such a church, in the funeral home). I want (minimal or to leave the arrangements to you). I would like (readings and songs). I would like any donations to go to (state charity etc.). I also would like (anything else that is important to you).

5. Leave information. If the one you want in charge of your affairs does not have the following information, you should have it placed in a secure place, such as a bank security box. You should leave:

a. The name(s) of your physicians, clergyman, lawyer(s), accountants and insurance agent.

b. The name of your DPA Executor.

c. The location of your will, insurance policies, financial information (stocks, bonds, accounts, etc.) etc.

Personally, I have not seen the necessity for a Living Will in our province. If you need more information about this you should talk to your clergyman and your attorney.

Are you ready to leave home? I hope so! It'll make your anticipation to leave much more peaceful! P.S.: Psychological and physical preparation are only partial, too! It us far more important that you are spiritually prepared. Are you?

Play is FUNdamental

A Special Series In Recognition Of The International Year Of The Family

Listen to children as they play. They will give you ideas about what you might provide to increase their involvement.

Extend ideas. If a child is galloping like a horse, perhaps a broom or a scarf for reins will add interest. If children are playing astronaut, maybe a well-timed phone call from Mission Control will get them to think about new possibilities for their travel. Babies might enjoy splashing in the bath, so a plastic cup could give them the added dimension of pouring as well. Listen carefully, and even playfully join in now and then, but make sure the play remains the children's, not yours.

Involve people. Children need time to play with adults. Babies love to sing, to play catch, to read books, and many other things that require an adult or another child. By age 3 most children prefer the company of their friends, so make sure other children are welcome in your home for at least part of the day. Companions make it possible for children to learn to share, to cooperate, to see another point of view. If distance is a problem, perhaps you can start a play group that meets once or twice a week. Nursery schools, child car, and other high quality group programs can offer your children even more learning possibilities.

Keep options available. A world of opportunity awaits every child. Make sure your children know no boundaries to excellence. Both boys and girls can be strong. Most will become parents. Children of all ethnic groups can grow in their understanding of humanity. Grandparents and babies can be a delight. Stereotypes have no place in play. Every child needs trucks, dolls, books, paints, an imagination, and friends.

Encourage cooperation. How often have you heard a parent say, "Jonathan, now you share with Emily" or "Sadonna, you may not throw dirt. Tell her you're sorry right now!"? But did you know that orders such as these rarely convince children to share and cooperate with each other? In fact, forcing children to behave in one way may result in just the opposite behavior. Children learn to share when people are generous with them. Children become compassionate when we are sensitive to their needs and feelings. Offer playthings and activities that naturally involve cooperating with others. Wagons usually need someone to pull and someone to ride. Telephones encourage two-way conversations.

Foster problem solving. Some problems are inevitable when children play, but even 2-year-olds can become great negotiators. Give children the opportunity to resolve problems themselves with words, unless violence is just about to happen and you must intervene. You may need to direct the problem solving at first, by asking each child to state what happened and what they think is fair or what should happen next.

In addition to getting along with others, children learn by tackling other types of problems in their play. Perhaps a puzzle with a few pieces is the right amount of challenge for a toddler. Or a bright object just out of reach entices a

EDUCATION WEEK

School library computerizing

Elk Point Elementary School is one of the first schools in the County of St. Paul to undertake the monumental task of computerizing their catalogue, a job which may take almost two years to complete.

The school has close to 20,000 volumes, and each one has to be handled separately during the cataloguing process. Librarian Myrna Fedorus and four volunteer helpers, Lee Johnson, Doris Wilson, Mary Anne Fry and Maria Salt, have been at the job since they completed a training program in mid-September, and as of last Tuesday, had completed processing 1,222 books.

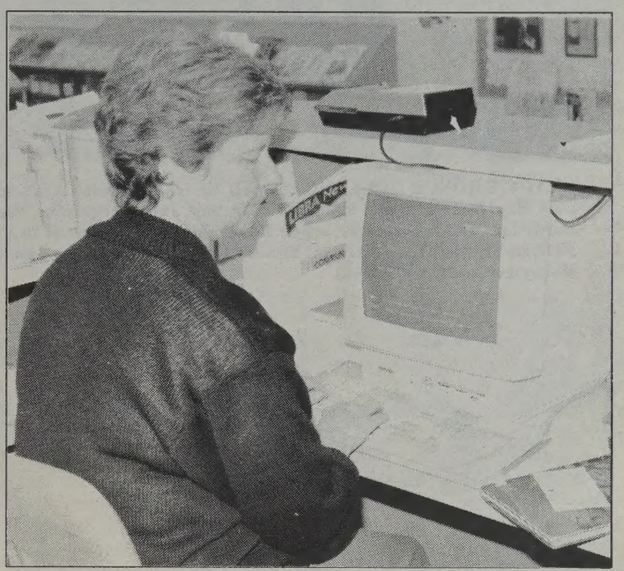
Each book must be removed from the shelf and its catalogue card removed from the appropriate drawer by Mrs. Fedorus. Then the computer-operating volunteers take over, feeding into the computer information on the book's author, call number, title, grade level, publisher, publication date, ISBN number, subject headings, fiction or non fiction classification, hard-cover or paperback, and an extra notation if the book has a Canadian author or illustrator. The book is then given a bar code before being returned to the shelf.

The team is able to process fifty books per day, and feel they have "probably hit our stride," according to Mrs. Fedorus. She relies on another dedicated group of parent volunteers to "just keep the general library routine going," by carding and shelving books.

Elk Point Elementary Principal Don Conrad said the volunteers have saved the school "a substantial amount" on the project, which may still cost close to $15,000. Some jurisdictions have utilized paid workers for their computerization projects, and have found it very costly., he noted. Instead, his school has "parents in here from early Monday morning on, each week working on the project." Start-up costs were donated by Amoco Canada, while further funding has come from the Parent Support Group.

At the completion of the project, books leaving and returning to the library will be stamped out and in with a bar-code wand, and the computer even has the capability of being programmed to phone the home of errant borrowers to seek out overdue books.

VALUED VOLUNTEERS - Doris Wilson (left) and Mary Anne Fry are two of the workers who are feeding the book information into the computer as Librarian Myrna Fedorus prepares the books. Helen Marceniuk (right) helps by carding and shelving books. Diane Frankiw also helps with carding and shelving.



LIBRARY GOES ON COMPUTER - as Doris Wilson and three other volunteer computer operators feed in the information on each book. Not shown are Maria Salt, Mary Anne Fry and Lee Johnson.

School spirit takes teamwork

School spirit at Elk Point Elementary is getting a boost, thanks to a new team concept initiated in September.

Teachers and support staff have been divided into four teams, each of which will take a two and a half month stint at picking a theme and coordination activities around it. Parents have been added to each of the teams, and will be helping with planning events during their allotted period.

The first team has just completed their segment, under the theme of "Ingathering" which reflected the autumn season of harvest and coming back to school. "We had really great parental support," Principal Don Conrad said. "Our potluck Thanksgiving supper went very well, with close to 200 people there, for instance." Just before Halloween, a "family of pumpkins," some creatively painted, some carved, and the largest weighing over a hundred pounds, were brought in to decorate the school.

This past Thursday was the final event for the first team, with a Remembrance Day assembly featuring Royal Canadian Legion Zone Commander Roy King as guest speaker, along with special songs from the music classes, a moment of silence and other special commemorative activities.

The parental, student and school components have worked very effectively."People helping people" is an aim of the concept, with everyone working together to maximize resources. Conrad says it's "a real family concept" with home and school working together. "We've always had a good working relationship, but now it's even better, and everyone's enthusiastic. We're looking forward to lots more activities as the other teams take over."

F.G. Miller High School Reporter

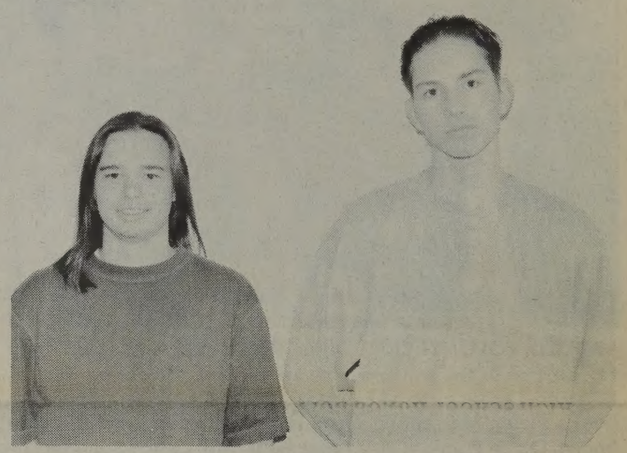
The Kozicky family is hosting an exchange student from Quebec - Mathieu Bherer. He has been living with them since September 13 and enjoys it.

Mathieu is 16 years old and comes from a family of four. He lives in St.-Felicien which is located in Lac St.-Jean. Mathieu says that his town is very similar to Elk Point, because both towns are small.

Mathieu goes to school at Polyvaleiute des Quatre-Vents. Twelve hundred students attend his school, so it is quite large compared to ours. He likes our school because it is small and everyone knows everyone else. Our school is different from his because we have 8 periods and the same schedule every day. In his school they have only 4 periods and are on a nine day schedule.

The thing that Mathieu likes best about Alberta is the countryside, and he says that the people are very friendly.

Mathieu goes back to Quebec on December 12, and then, in February, Ryan Kozicky goes to live with him until May.



EXCHANGE STUDENT - Mathieu Behrer (left) is currently staying at the home of Ryan Kozicky, who will be making the return visit later in the school year.

Hint #3

A cleaner that won't flush the environment down the drain.

To unblock drains: pour 125ml of baking soda followed by 125ml of vinegar down the drain pipe and cover with stopper.

Many common household drain cleaners are toxic and are potential hazardous waste. If you do use them, be aware that when the product is finished, its container should not be discarded with your regular garbage. Store it and all hazardous waste in a safe place for special waste collection or drop off your hazardous waste at a designated station.

crawling infant. Or finding a way to design a stage for a neighborhood puppet show engages preschool or school-age children. It's tempting just to provide a solution when children hit a snag , but they won't learn much that way. If children become frustrated, it is far better to help them find their own solutions. Ambulance Service resumes

1977, and have also split the deficit on the rare occasions the service did not run at a profit. St. Paul Ambulance serves the portion of the County from Atimoswe Creek west, and into the County of Smoky Lake to Vilna, and requires 23 trips to Edmonton per month to break even.

Lambright has been serving the eastern portion of the County, or roughly 5 to 6000 people, including 2000 in the county, 1400 in town, plus residents of the counties of Two Hills and Vermilion River, plus Frog Lake Reserve and Fishing Lake Settlement. The eastern portion of the area, including Frog Lake and Fishing Lake, are served by Lambright's ambulance station at Tulliby Lake, which is holding its own financially. It is the western portion which has operated at a continually growing deficit.

Serving the western portion of the County from St. Paul was considered, but Dr. Drew Ramful felt that there would be a lengthy response time, and "we cannot wait more than 10 minutes." A number of the community's elderly have contacted Ramful to express their concern at being left without an ambulance, he said.

A second meeting was set up Thursday afternoon. At that time, Colleen Simon stated the basic need, which is for 24 hour amulance service with at least one ambulance that can respond immediately. She noted that there are times when a second ambulance would be required, but since this is infrequent, "we have to provide service at a reasonable cost." Ms Simon said that the hospital budgets $45,000 per year for ambulance service.

Lambright gave tentative "bottom line" figures, using an average of three transfers per month plus local calls, for an approximate $4500 in revenue. He needs roughly $7500 per month to keep going, and is himself willing to work 7 days a week for $1000 per month, and provide dispatch.

The Town and County later agreed to share the costs to get Lambright's service back in operation until the end of the year, while a thorough study of the options and feasibility of each is determined. Funding will also be studied at length.

What's News at the Library

Christmas has come early!

Michele Duczek
Librarian

Christmas has come early to the Elk Point Public Library this year with the arrival of almost a hundred new books. The new book shelf will not hold the bounty so come in and check some out. There are books for all ages. This week, I'll talk about the children's titles.

The Golden Filly, the Twelve Candles Club, theNorthwoods and the Mandie books are very popular among young people. We have also received the latest from Sweet Valley High, Sweet Valley Twins and Friends, Babysitter's Club, Babysitter's Little Sister, Saddle Club, Nancy Drew, Hardy Boys and Road to Avonlea.

The Elk Point Public Library will be participating in the 1995 Young Readers' Choice Award. This is an award chosen by readers and involves juvenile and youth paperbacks. Readers are requested to read a minimum number of nominated books and then vote on their favorite. Some of the nominated books have just arrived at the library and are on display. Interested readers can check out these titles. I've looked at these books and I want to read several of them myself.

Other new titles include several nonfiction for kids. One series is called 'Creepy Creatures.' Titles include Awesome Amphibians, Alarming Animals and Revolting Reptiles. We also have three new titles in the Amateur Science Series: The Amateur Geologist, the Amateur Meteorologist and The Amateur Naturalist. Tips, projects and information abound in each book.

Lest the younger children think I'm neglecting them, I'm pleased to announce that there are new picture books as well. Best selling fiction author Joy Tan (The Joy Luck Club, The Kitchen God's Wife) has just come out with a book for children titled The Chinese Siamese Cat. This richly illustrated book tells the story of Sagwa, a famous feline who lived in the home of a foolish magistrate. Sagwa's interference turns a foolish rule into a great one and the people all praise the magistrate. Check out this and the other new picture books.

Friday Mornings: Storytime is every week at 10:30 a.m. Stories, songs, crafts and more.

Elks start season with 1-1 record this past weekend

Elk Point Elks started their 1994-95 Sask-Alta League hockey season this past weekend with a pair of home games, winning the first with a 5 - 1 decision over Vermilion Senators and losing the second to Paradise Valley Jets by a 6-4 margin.

Friday night's game against Vermilion saw Elks newcomer Billy Halfe score two goals and one assist, while Blair Halfe added one goal and two assists. Sheldon Cardinal and Corey Laboucane scored the remaining two goals, while the balance of assists came from Dwayne Karbashewski, Allan Loughran and Sheldon Cardinal. Curtis Porcina provided solid goaltending for the Elks, while coach Keith Campbell said that there was ``good overall team defence.''

Sunday's game against the Jets saw the Elks down by two before Shane Kossey put the Elks on the scoreboard off an assist by Brad Colville and Rick Austin. The Jets were ahead 3- 1 by the time Blair Halfe scored the Elks' second goal, assisted by Mike Boratynec. The Jets marked a fourth goal before Dwayne Karbashewski came through with a pair of goals to tie the game, assisted in both by Jeff Buck and Blair Halfe. The Jets were quick to reply with a pair of unassisted goals on the Elks' Daryl Bodnar, to win with a final score of 6 - 4.

The Elks' next action is in Marwayne Friday night at 8:00 p.m., with the next home game slated for Friday, November 25 at 8:30 p.m. against Cold Lake.

NOTICE

THE PUBLIC UTILITIES BOARD FOR THE PROVINCE OF ALBERTA

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING OF AN APPLICATION BY ELK POINT GAS, LTD. TO DECREASE ITS GAS COST RECOVERY RATE FOR 1994/1995

Elk Point Gas, Ltd. (Elk Point) has applied to the Public Utilities Board (the Board) for a decrease of 20.2 cents/GJ in its Gas Cost Recovery Rate (GCRR) for the period November 1, 1994 through to October 31, 1995.

Elk Point's application dated October 24, 1994 as amended by letter dated November 7, 1994 was filed in compliance with the Deferred Gas Accounting and Reconciliation (DGA) procedures approved by the Board in Decision E92012 dated February 5, 1992. These procedures require Elk Point to reconcile its actual gas costs with GCRR revenues for the preceding gas contract year in order to reflect differences between actual and forecast produced and purchased gas costs. Elk Point also is required to submit a revised GCRR for the forthcoming gas contract year to reflect a forecast of its gas consumption and gas costs.

In Decision E94097 the Board approved a GCRR of $1.192/GJ for the 1993/1994 gas year. Elk Point is now requesting approval for a GCRR of $0.990/GJ.

TAKE NOTICE that the Board will conduct a public hearing for the purpose of receiving evidence and representations with respect to the above matter.

The public hearing relating to Elk Point's GCRR will be held at the Board's Hearing Room on the 12th Floor, 10055-106 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, on Thursday, November 24, 1994 commencing at 1:30 p.m.

After consideration of all filed material and the evidence presented during the proceedings, the Board may accept, reject or vary the GCRR proposed by Elk Point.
